JCPA Needs Your Support

The Jewish Council for Public Affairs (JCPA) is the national umbrella body for Jewish organizations engaged in public policy and community relations.

JCPA member organizations include 14 national agencies and 125 community relations councils.

The Washington Post has just posted an op-ed piece supporting the Local Law Enforcement Hate Crimes Prevention Act, co-authored by JCPA President Rabbi Steve Gutow, Rev. Dr. Michel Kinnamon, the general secretary of the National Council of Churches, and Dr. Sayyid M. Syeed, the national director of the Office for Interfaith and Community Alliances for the Islamic Society of North America. To read the piece, click here.

Steve, Michael, and Sayyid previously made the news together earlier this year when, even though they had differing views on the crisis, they issued a joint prayer for the people of Gaza. They are demonstrating that there are issues affecting the improvement of the human condition upon which followers of the three Abrahamic faiths can find common ground.

The JCPA and many of its member agencies, led by the Anti-Defamation League, have been proactively supporting the Local Law Enforcement Hate Crimes Prevention Act.
